ATLAS CINEMA

A unique sound mixing and testing hall, situated as a production process in a cinema with exceptionally good acoustics.

Professional post-production of film sound takes place in studio conditions that simulate optimal cinema. Atlas Cinema has one of the best acoustics in Prague, a large distance from the screen and a large time period from morning to early afternoon, when its unique features can be used to set up high-end video and sound post-production. It is the spatial complexity of the solution that makes Prague one of the most sought-after locations for film production, even by foreign productions, but the existing capacity is far from sufficient to meet the demand. We are aiming to create a unique workplace that will offer a hub for the creation of the last phase of film and possibly even game sound, and then we want to follow up with a somewhat analogous layer of processes related to the image.

Unique selling points:

- Unique post-production and test hub for multi-channel audio.
- A platform for education and presentation of audio post-production possibilities.
